U. S. Increase In Gold Price Is Predicted

An international banker today predicted that the price of gold will be revalued upward from its present pegged price of $35 per ounce "in the not distant future."

He is Joseph C. Rovensky, for more than a quarter of a century head of the foreign department of the giant Chase National bank here and still a director of many large corporations here and abroad.

"It is my firm conviction," Rovensky told the United Press, "that eventually the big governments like the United States will have to revalue the price of gold upward."

The main reason that the official gold price has held for $35 for so long, he said, is that so many countries throughout the world are in such bad financial shape.

We apologize for being so late with Coins & Chatter and correspondence. Keep the orders and collections coming - we'll be caught up soon!

COINS WITH BIBLE NARRATIVE

* * * ATHENIAN TETRADRACHM

Here is Athena, the Greek goddess of Wisdom, with her wise little owl. They both look very complacent and self-assured. This Greek coin was struck between 490 and 400 B.C.

Athens was named for Athena. Originally, in the Greek, the name meant the light of dawn. To the Romans it was the equivalent of Minerva.

Athena was a daughter of Zeus (Jupiter). She is here wearing her helmet decorated with olive leaves. The olive tree was sacred to her. This is the reason: Attica (Athens) was having a contest which promised that the god or goddess that could show the greatest creative power, that could perform the miracle that would bring the greatest benefit to mankind, should be known thereafter as the city's chief diety.

Poseidon (poe-sy' don), also known as Neptune, a contestant, struck the Acropolis--upper fortified hill of the city--with his trident. Out gushed from that 400-foot-high barren rock a spring of water. Alas, it was brackish!

Athena caused an olive tree to grow on that hill. That was a real gift to mankind. Poseidon was so jealous, that he sent floods of water, and inundated the olive tree; but some of its root was left and it sent up a new growth. So the Athenians had an olive tree, after all. The olive became their chief source of wealth, and Athena, in accord with the promise of the contest, became the city's chief diety.

What a wonderful goddess Athena was! Although the principal scene of her good deeds was Attica, she advanced the general happiness of all Greeks. She invented the arts of sewing and weaving. As a health goddess she was associated with Asclepius (as-cle' pi-us), god of Medicine and Healing, at Athens. She taught how to take care of newborn babies. Of course, she was always victorious in every struggle, for she was invulnerable.

This archaic-styled silver tetradrachm was made after moneyers had advanced beyond the plain incuse; moreover, they had expanded the decorated incuse to the very edge of the coin. Consequently we have here on the reverse, a very large incuse; it has Athen's big-eyed little owl, a branch of her sacred olive tree, and--obverse, too!--a very tiny waning moon in the field between the olive and the owl.

That waning moon is what places the coin down to B.C. 490. Here is its story: The Athenians greatly feared the Medes and Persians. One day their fears became a horrible realization--the Medo-Persians were landing on the Plain of Marathon just east of the city. There were many times as many as the number of men Athens could possibly put in the field, Attica seemed doomed. In desperation they sent a swift messenger to Sparta (southern Greece), imploring the Spartans to come to their aid without delay. There was no time to be lost!

The Spartans replied, that they dared not come at once, because their religion forbade them to march when the moon was waning.

Athenian generals rallied all their forces, and through some very clever measures, they were able by swift action of those exceedingly astute and skilled officers, completely to route the invaders, and that, with loss to themselves that was insignificant compared with what they inflicted upon the enemy.

After that, the waning moon was to the Athenians, so given to superstition, a real ally, a bringer of good fortune.

One of the fascinations of the study of numismatics is that we may find in such tiny things as the waning moon on this ancient coin, such momentous historical events as the famous Battle of Marathon 490 B.C.

In the golden days of Greece no other place in the world was the equal of Athens in learning and civilization. St. Paul went there in 53 A.D. and Luke tells us in Acts 17:16, "his. . . spirit was stirred in him, when he saw the city wholly given to idolatry"--to the worship of their several mythological gods and goddesses. Then and there he delivered his famous Mars' Hill speech:

"Ye men of Athens, I perceive that in all things he are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, TO THE UNKNOWN GOD. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." Read Acts 17: 22-31.

THE GRANT MEMORIAL COINAGE

Ulysses S. Grant was born on April 2, 1822, and in 1922, the 100th anniversary of his birth, another commemorative coinage was produced.

In 1921 an organization was incorporated in Ohio under the name of the Ulysses S. Grant Centenary Memorial Association, to conduct appropriate celebrations in Clermont County, where General Grant was born. It was also determined to erect memorial buildings at Georgetown, Brown County, Ohio, where Grant lived as a boy and from which place he was named as a cadet for West Point, and at Bethel, Clermont County, where he lived for a short time after his graduation.

To help defray the cost of these undertakings, a bill was introduced in Congress for the government to mint gold dollars to be sold by the committee at a premium. This was amended before being passed and approved on Feb. 2, 1922, to read in part as follows:

"An Act to authorize the coinage of a Grant memorial gold dollar and a Grant silver half-dollar in commemoration of the centenary of the birth of General Ulysses S. Grant, late president of the United States."

Under this act, 10,000 gold coins were authorized and 250,000 half-dollars were added. Also the word "memorial" was substituted in the bill for "souvenir" in describing the coins. The design, which is the same for both the gold dollar and the silver half-dollar, is the work of Mrs. Laura Gardin Fraser of New York.
